FRENCH LOUIS XVI STYLE 1950S OFF WHITE PAINTED BENCH WITH CARVED CROSS STRETCHER

$1,800

A French Louis XVI style painted wood bench from circa 1950 with off-white distressed painted finish, tapered legs and carved cross-stretcher. This exquisite French Louis XVI style painted wood bench, circa 1950, offers an air of refined elegance and timeless design to any living space. The bench features an off-white distressed painted finish that gracefully showcases the natural beauty and intricate craftsmanship of the wood beneath. Each of the tapered legs is meticulously carved with gadroon-style motifs at the knees, enhancing the piece's classic appeal. The highlight of this bench is the elegantly carved cross-stretcher, which arches gracefully in the center, adorned with delicate foliage and scrolls, symbolizing the exquisite craftsmanship of the Louis XVI style. This design not only reinforces the bench's stability but also adds an artistic touch that captures the eye.

Completing the bench's sophisticated appearance is the striped upholstery, which provides a bold contrast to the soft wood finish. This fabric choice adds a touch of modernity and comfort, making the bench a versatile addition to any interior. Ideal for placement in a foyer, at the foot of a bed, or as additional seating in a living room, this bench effortlessly blends with various decor styles, from traditional to contemporary. Its distressed finish and elegant details make it a focal point that invites conversation and admiration.
