

TRAMP ART 1900S TURN OF THE CENTURY FRENCH CARVED MIRROR WITH RAISED MEDALLION

$1,950

A French Tramp Art hand-carved wooden mirror from circa 1900 with circular protruding raised medallions in the corners. This French Tramp Art hand-carved wooden mirror, dating back to circa 1900, is a remarkable example of folk artistry and detailed craftsmanship. The frame of the mirror features a series of circular protruding raised medallions at each corner, lending it a distinctive and textural depth. These larger medallions are complemented by smaller medallions, placed meticulously at the center of each side, creating a balanced and harmonious design. The intricate hand-carved details showcase the unique Tramp Art style, characterized by its layered and chip-carved wood elements. The mirror itself acts as a window to the past, reflecting the artistic trends and skills of the early 20th century. Its rustic charm is further enhanced by the patina it has acquired over the years, telling a story of time and history. In a contemporary home, this Tramp Art mirror could serve as a stunning wall accent in a living room, dining area, or hallway. Its historical significance and artistic value make it an excellent conversation starter, while its aesthetic appeal adds warmth and character to the space. It could also be a focal point in a study or library, complementing other antique furnishings or collections.
